Measure Individual Drivers

True Colours introduces the value of recognising peoples internal drivers and preferred dimensions, so we can understand and appreciate diversity. The methodology does not label or categorise people, rather it identifies behaviours based on our characteristics that is driven by situations and interactions with those around us. It provides an easy to use tool to understand someone's potential reactions, so we can fine tune our communications to gain the best result for all.

Introducing The Individual Development Matrix

The individual development matrix provides a measurable platform for personal and professional development. An essential tool for fast tracking employees to their personal best and for identifying and developing your future leaders. Through a series of questions and 360 degree feedback the matrix highlights strengths and development areas, that when applied to a training and coaching platform provides effective measurable results.

On completion of your certification training, you will be able to implement the matrix and provide coaching as well as training to develop your people. True Colours will help you:

- Build effective cohesive teams and increase productivity by considering colour blends
- Enhance individual and group performance
- Lead with credibility and inspiration by tapping into your hidden resources
- Understand the unmet needs behind conflict and stress
- Transform judgment into understanding
- Identify communication gaps that cause misunderstandings
- Defuse negativity with empathetic listening
- Reduce stress and maintain balance
- Develop individual strengths and qualities
